

Tech in the Classroom: How Do Parents Feel About It?

Parents are unsure how tech will impact jobs for their kids

23% of parents believe tech will create jobs.

37% believe it will lead to fewer jobs.

Parents feel differently about tech depending on where it's being used

63% of parents worry their child is spending too much time on tech at home.

While only 38% of parents worry their child is spending too much time on tech at school.

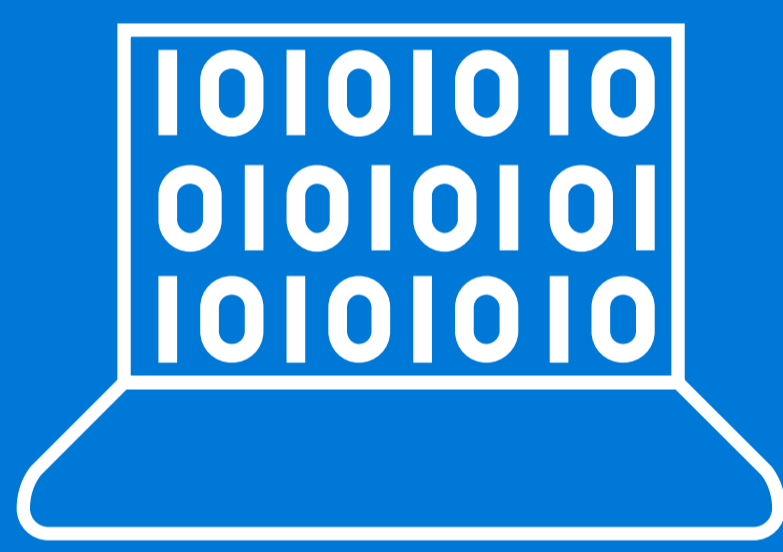

However, overall there's agreement technology is helpful in the classroom

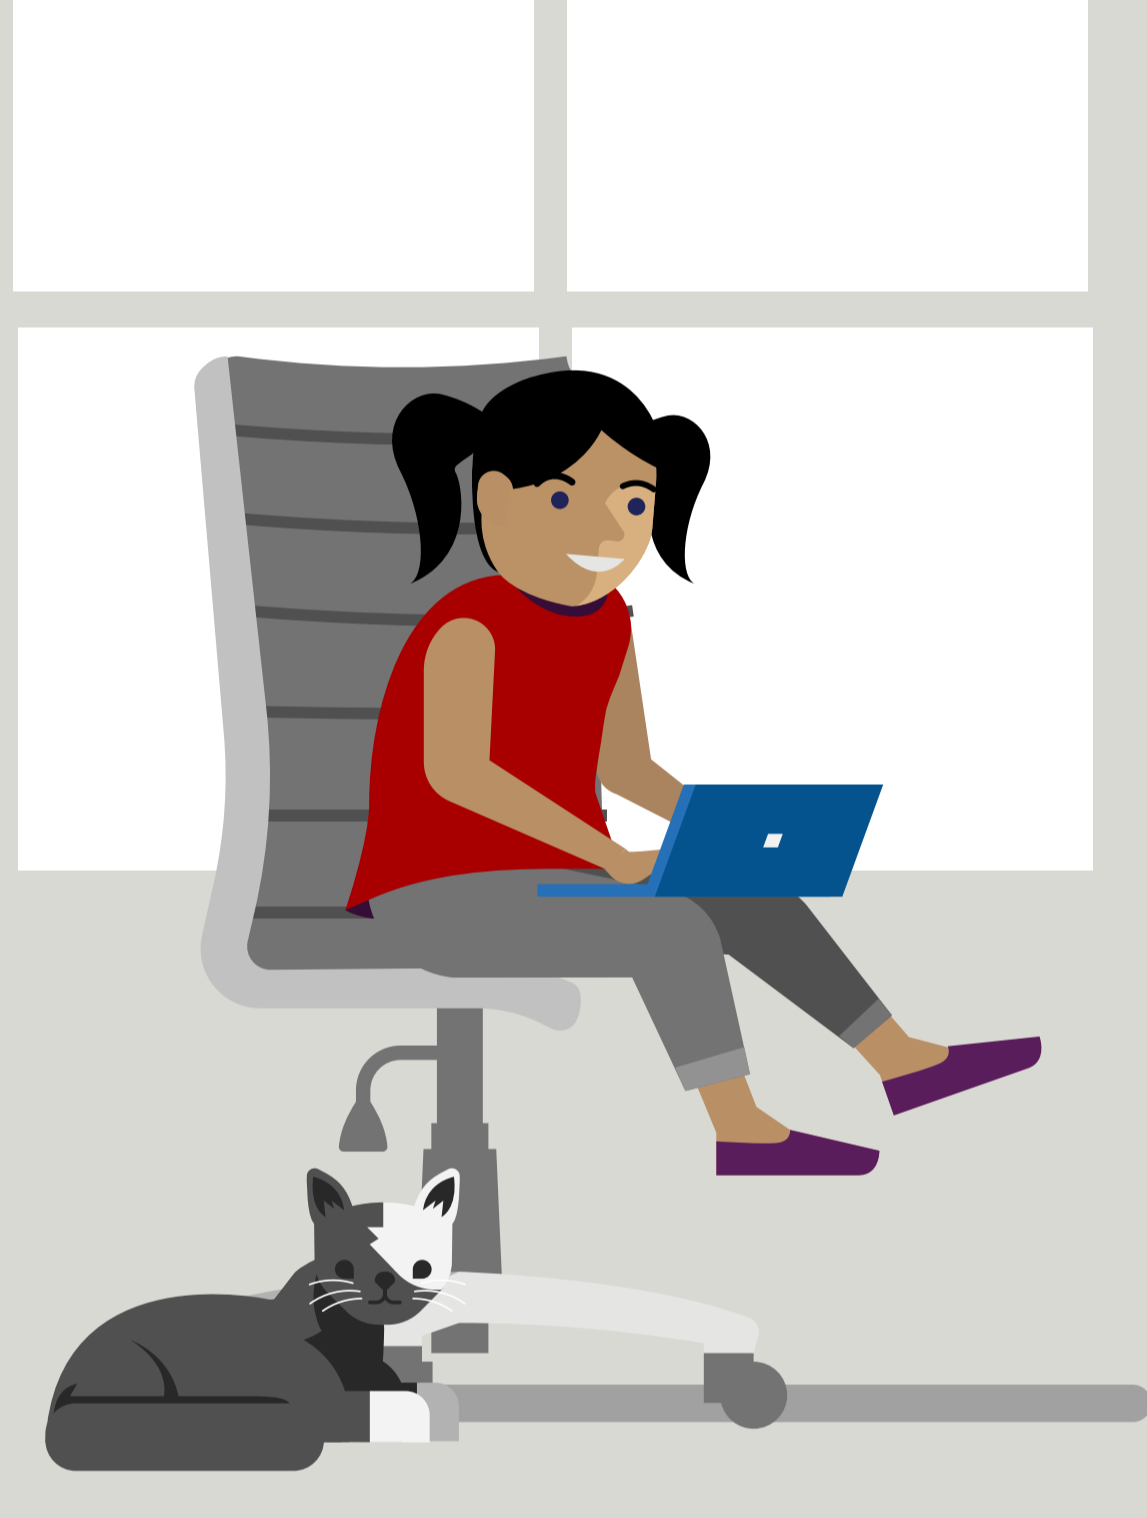

86% of parents believe tech (computers and educational software) is beneficial to their child's education.

Majority also see technology as an essential skill

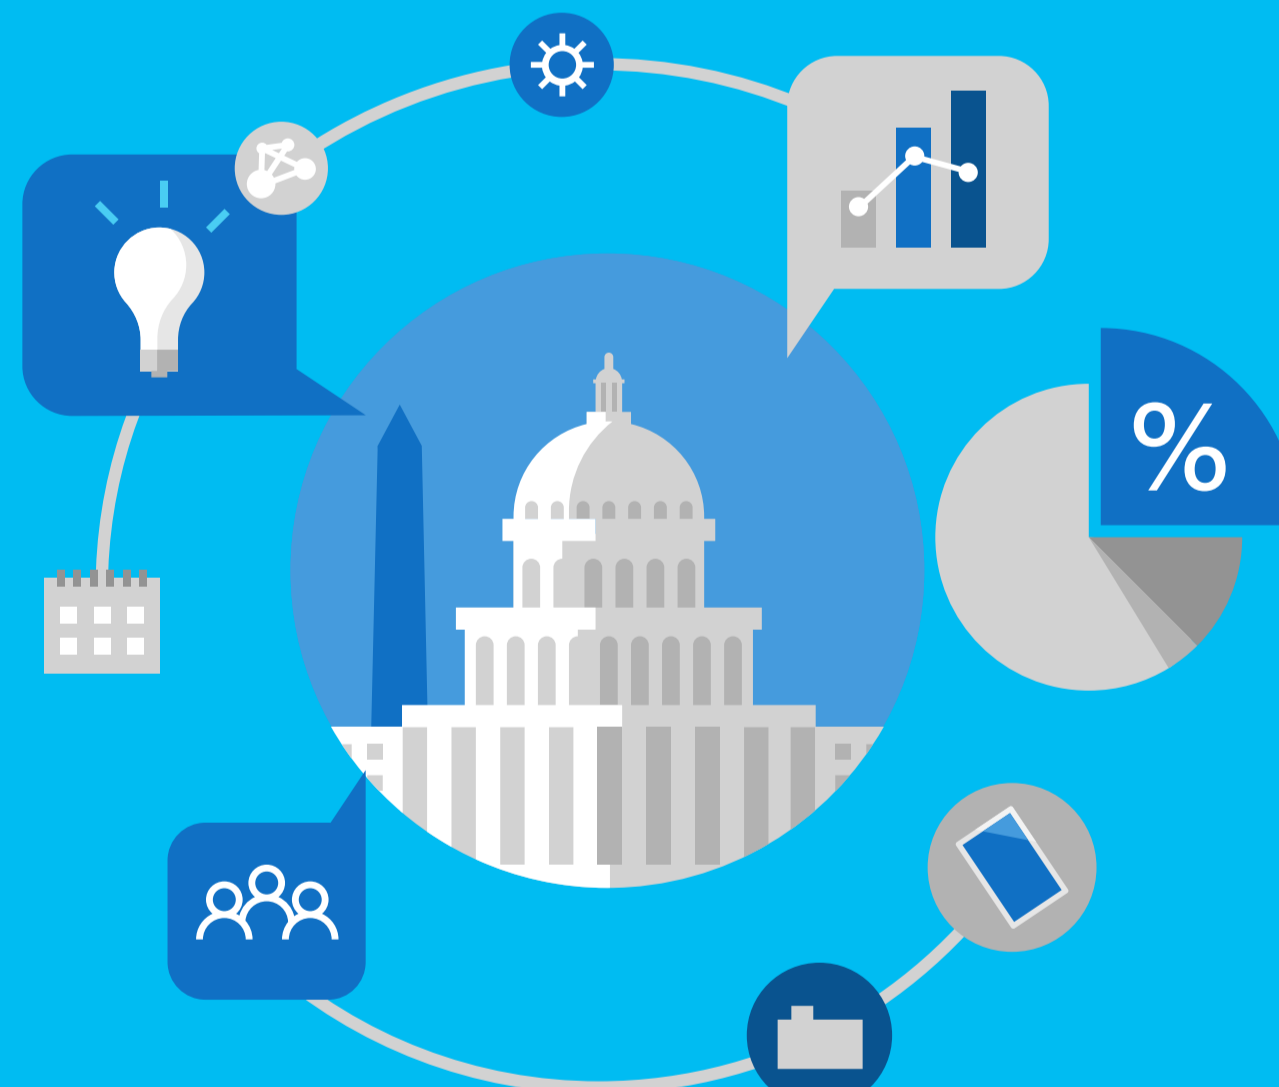

Most parents (50%) see coding as the skill most beneficial to their kids' future, compared to foreign language skills at 28% and cursive/handwriting at 14%.

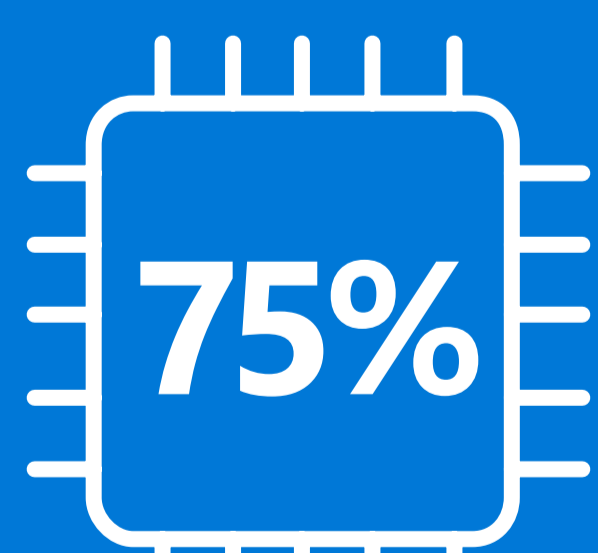

Federal government needs to do more

67% of parents are concerned that the government is not supporting their children's digital skills.

Big tech has a role to play, too

75% of parents believe big tech companies should help close the tech gap in America's schools.

Most parents feel positive about technology's role

60% of parents are optimistic or hopeful about the role of technology in their children's lives, and 30% are unsure or scared.

